SJOGREN'S SYNDROME

Definition: Sjogren's Syndrome (SS) is a chronic slowly progressive autoimmune disease characterized by lymphocytic infiltration and destruction of the salivary and lacrimal glands. The clinical types of Sjogren's syndrome are Primary Sjogren's syndrome (alone), Secondary Sjogren's syndrome (develops in addition to other autoimmune diseases) and Sicca Syndrome (Xerophthalmia & Xerostomia).

Epidemiology: SS, although a common disorder in western countries with an estimated prevalence of 3 in 100 to 1 in 1000, 1 has rarely been reported from India. The disease affects people of all races, ethnicities and ages. However, women are nine times more likely to develop this condition than men.

Aetiology: Exact cause of abnormal immune system response is not clear. But some factors may play a key role are Environmental factors, Genetics, Sex hormones and Viral infections.

Clinical Presentations: Extremely dry eyes, dry mouth and may also experience muscle pain, joint pain, abnormal sense of taste, blurry vision, dry cough, enlarged salivary glands, fatigue, early tooth decay, vaginal dryness.

Pathophysiology: (1) initiation by an exogenous factor; (2) disruption of salivary gland epithelial cells; (3) T lymphocyte migration and lymphocytic infiltration of exogenous glands; (4) B lymphocyte hyper-reactivity and production of rheumatoid factor and antibodies to Ro(SS-A) and La(SS-B).

Risk Factors: There's no specific cause or risk factor. Nine out of 10 people who have the condition are women, postmenopausal women and who have a family history.

Complications: Yeast infection in the mouth, Blurred vision, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Hepatitis, Numbness, Peripheral neuropathy.

Diagnosis: Schirmer tear test strip, Radiologic nuclear medicine salivary scans, Biopsy, Blood testing and Anti-nuclear antibodies (ANA) test.

Treatment: Topical 0.5% methylcellulose – Keratoconjunctivitis sicca; (2.5-5mg/kg) Cyclosporin – Xerostomia and 16mg Bromhexine TDS – Lacrimal secretions.

VISION: To enrich students and faculty with editorial and communication skills.

EDITOR'S DESK

Excessive centralisation of skilling programmes may hinder the ability of training institutions to effectively respond to Indian market requirements. Firms worry that the employees would leave, so some of the gains of her increased skills would go to future employers. Individuals are often hobbled by the difficulties of Indian finance, and face high interest rates or absence of credit access. In order to recognize and support migration flows, skilling solutions have to take place with an eye to the national market of labour. There are considerable labour migration flows taking place within the country and across the border. There is a need to address foundation skills, including soft skills, recognizing the limitations of elementary education. Excessive centralization of design, of policy or of skill programmes, hinder the ability of skilling organizations to respond to the felt needs of the community. This calls for a flexible approach where decision-makers at the ground level look at the reality around them and adapt themselves to fit in it.
